

Andrea Silveria

One page to keep everything consistent: your site, your Substack, your slides, your email.

THE LOGO

- Two versions: cream on dark backgrounds, navy on light ones. Nothing in between.
- Use the mark on its own where space is small or square: profile images, favicons.
- Over a photo, place it on a calm, dark area such as sky or water. Never over busy detail.

- Leave clear space around it, at least the height of the moon on every side.
- Below about an inch and a half wide, use the horizontal version or the mark alone.
- Don't recolor it, stretch it, add a shadow, or retype the name in another font.

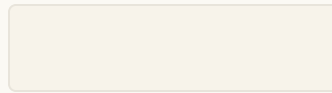

COLORS

Dusk Navy

#1A2430

Logo backgrounds, dark sections

Cream

#F7F3EA

Light backgrounds, logo on dark

Ink

#32352E

Body text. Softer than black

Sand

#C7AE87

Small accents and fine lines

Lake Slate

#5F7484

Coaching: buttons and highlights

Clay

#B4623F

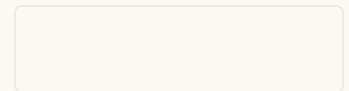

Consulting: buttons and highlights

Sage

#74806F

Small labels above headings

Paper

#FBF9F4

Page background

- Slate always means coaching and Clay always means consulting. Keep them to their own side.

- Most of any page is Paper, Cream and Ink. The colors are accents, used sparingly.

TYPE

Newsreader

ANDREA SILVERIA

Finding purpose in the pause.

Headings, your name, and pull quotes. Light weight for large headings. Italic for quotes and lines you want read slowly.

Your name, as set in the logo: regular weight, all caps, letter spacing 0.16 em. In Canva, set Letter spacing to 160.

- Both are free to download and install from fonts.google.com. In Canva, Newsreader is listed by name and Mulish is listed under its older name, Muli.

Mulish

COACHING & CONSULTING

Body text looks like this, plain and easy to read.

Everything else. Regular weight for paragraphs, semibold for buttons.

The line under your name, and small labels: semibold, all caps, letter spacing 0.36 em. In Canva, set Letter spacing to 360.

- Two fonts only. If a third one shows up, it stops looking like you.